CONCURRENT SESSIONS

8:30 a.m. – 9:30 a.m.

Panel 16. Parting the Clouds: a Clear and Straightforward Beneficiary Experience

Ann Binzer, The Cincinnati Life Insurance Co., Cincinnati, OH

Jill Rewis, Prudential, Jacksonville, FL

Would your beneficiaries describe their claim experience as coming out of a fog or walking off into the sunset? While the requirements for filing a claim may be similar across companies, the ways that a claim is processed or the beneficiary's experience may vary greatly. In today's environment the consumer experience is a critical differentiator, with some arguing it is the most important factor. As such, many companies have focused on offering alternative channels for service and reducing paperwork, but is there more that should be considered? What have other companies done to improve the process? During this interactive session we will discuss the "beneficiary experience" and how your company may be able to help beneficiaries "sail into the sunset" versus coming out of a fog.

Panel 17. Evaluating Pharmacy Trends in Disability Claims

Nikki Wilson, PharmD, MBA, Coventry, Elkhorn, NE

Employers, carriers, and TPAs face numerous challenges when managing pharmacy in workers' compensation and disability claims. The opioid epidemic; emerging transformations in pharmaceutical design, drug manufacturing, and medication delivery; and frequent regularity changes all require new levels of analysis and understanding. This presentation provides insightful perspectives on the trends behind these and other pharmacy-related insights.

Panel 18. Legal Update - Life

Jeannine C. Jacobson, Robinson+Cole, Miami, FL

Learn about the most significant recent developments in life insurance and interpleader litigation. We will discuss trends and challenges impacting life insurance claim administration to assist claims and legal professionals with the handling of these claims.

Panel 19. Respect Your Elders – How to Recognize Financial Elder Abuse

Erin Worthington, CFE, Munich RE, Atlanta, GA

They've got the money, and the fraudsters want it. Will you be an unwitting participant in their scheme, or will you be the one to stop them in their tracks? Learn how to recognize the signs of financial elder abuse and the schemes being used to manipulate our most vulnerable citizens into parting with their financial assets.

Panel 20. Predictive Analytics to Uncover the Power of Claims Data

Clinton Innes, Munich Re, Toronto, ON

In this session, we will discuss how predictive models and machine learning can be used to drive value from claims data. We cover various models for claims and describe key attributes of claims data that can be leveraged to optimize the claims management processes. We will also discuss how to integrate models into existing claims management practices.

We will present two examples of claims models:

- Claim scoring – For disability claims, predict return to work rates for efficient claims triage
- Foreign death fraud – For life claims, apply machine learning to uncover fake deaths registered abroad

TUESDAY, MARCH 31, 2020

CONCURRENT SESSIONS

9:45 a.m. – 10:45 a.m.

Panel 21. Digital Investigations & Life Claims

Rich McKeon, CYFORTEC Group, LLC, Mansfield, CT

Iraida Labra, Munich RE, Atlanta, GA

The ever changing digital landscape presents constant challenges for investigators. Techniques and exploits, designed to harvest vast troves of digital intelligence, and dwindling as providers tighten security. Our presenters will discuss investigative challenges in “The Digital World” and highlight concerns uncovered from an informal survey of practitioners. The round table style session encourages frank dialogue about the challenges we face and solutions being implemented with success.

Panel 22. Examiner's Guide to Mental Health

Dr. Michael Lacroix, The Hartford, Sarasota, FL

Among the most challenging types of claims facing insurance adjusters are Mental Illness – Mental Health – Behavioral Health - Mental / Nervous claims. Even the language is confusing: Is “Behavioral Health” just a diplomatic euphemism for “Mental Illness,” or is it something else? Interestingly, there is no Wikipedia entry for Behavioral Health, the term used most often these days when discussing these types of claims; Wikipedia’s contribution is a re-direct to Mental Health. Confused yet? And how does this confusion impact on disability entitlement and employers’ duties under FMLA and ADA? A psychologist introduces you to this sometimes perplexing and frustrating world; a Venn diagram analysis and a little history will take you a long way toward understanding. We then address these different labels and overlapping conditions from the practical perspective of a disability insurer: What do you need to know? What can / should you do when faced with these types of claims?

Panel 23. DI Case Law Update

Sherril Colombo, Esq., Littler Mendelson, PC, Miami, FL

A round –up and discussion of the latest and case law in the Disability Income claim market.

Panel 24. Turning Trash into Treasure

Lisa J. Ribacoff, MEd.,LPI, CPE, Internation Investigation Group, LLC, Rockville Centre, NY

The focus of the session will be discussing the various techniques and successful approaches that investigators use to assist in determining the truth of a claim. We will be focusing on a tiered approach for this presentation starting from conducting background investigations and forensic interviews of the claimants/witnesses, in field surveillance efforts utilizing hidden cameras and ending with discussing the significant benefits of collecting someone's trash or "dumpster diving" and the types of information that can be learned.

Panel 25. Game Theory

Jay Kenigsberg, Esq., Rivkin Radler, Uniondale, NY

Game theory provides a model that can predict or suggest the decisions we should make. At work, it may not be obvious, but we are always playing a game, either as individuals or as part of a team. Explore some of the game theories that determine success in the workplace. Game theory teaches us that the actions and choices made by all participants affect the outcome of each participant. In other words, understanding game theory should increase your overall chance of success. But, what exactly is success? The dilemmas presented in this fun workshop might have you thinking a little differently about your goals and how they are best to be achieved.

Join this lively and open forum that will focus on complex disability claims.

Panel 28. Can you Take it Back? (Rescissions)

Michelle d’Arcambal, d’Arcambal, Ousley & Cuyler Burk LLP, New York, NY
Vedant Gokhale, d’Arcambal, Ousley & Cuyler Burk LLP, New York, NY

What makes a disability or life insurance policy contestable and when is it contestable? Timing, proof and medical documentation issues. Fraud in insurance transactions used to be easier to hide, and policies were more readily contestable. Imposters and homicidal intention were the little known exceptions to the two year contestability period. But now, financial fraud and schemes from years past are being proactively used to void policies at their inception in some states. At the same time, it is becoming more difficult to perform routine contestability reviews after death because of limited access to medical records: next of kin refusal to provide authorizations and/ or providers requiring subpoenas or court orders hinder identification of policies issued based on material misrepresentations. What are the strategies for the new decade? Declaratory judgments? More aggressive lobbying? Litigating through appeal? Identifying red flags in transactions in both underwriting and during life of the policy?

Panel 29. Forensic Case Studies – Know the Fraud Indicators

Ernest Patrick Smith, Nawrocki, Smith, Melville, NY

Case studies are the best way to understand forensic investigations. 2020 brings a combination of new and old fraud indicators – come and learn all you need to know to be successful!

Panel 30. Building a Multigenerational & Diverse Claim Team

Lindsey Lajoie, Symetra, Enfield, CT

Meredith Heibert, Ohio National Financial Services, Cincinnati, OH

As the workforce ages, new and less tenured employees are joining the industry. It's easy to become hung up on the challenges presented when trying to bridge a generational gap, and this session will focus on management methods to overcome the obstacles presented as well as the advantages of fostering a diverse and multigenerational team.
